

A Message
from the PRESIDENT

Anthony L. Jenkins, Ph.D.

Dear Yellow Jacket Nation:

First, I want to commend our entire campus for coming together and displaying incredible resolve in the face of the COVID-19 pandemic. Together, we are working to ensure that quality instruction for our students remains our top priority during these unprecedented times.

As per my earlier communications, remote delivery of courses utilizing a variety of alternative learning options began this week, and I appreciate the cooperation of our students, faculty and staff for working so closely together to ensure that our classes will continue through the remainder of our spring semester.

Also, for the remainder of the spring semester, only employees deemed crucial to carry out the needed functions and safety of the University will be permitted on campus. All others will continue to work remotely from home for the duration of the spring semester. Your immediate supervisor will continue to provide direction regarding work assignments and expectations. Campus buildings and offices will remain locked for security purposes, and all office functions are being carried out remotely.

Students, I know you have questions regarding services, financial aid, reimbursements and other important topics. My team is working with the appropriate federal and state departments to resolve all of your questions. I encourage you to keep forwarding us your questions.

I want to remind everyone that we have established a webpage with more information about COVID-19, please visit it regularly at www.wvstateu.edu/coronavirus for official updated information. In addition, please continue to monitor your University email account for updates.

Take care, be well and Go STATE,

Anthony L. Jenkins, Ph.D.
President
